"Tweet tweet!" The bird outside Hello Kitty's window sang a happy good morning song. It was time to wake up and start the day.

Hello Kitty opened her eyes and hopped out of bed.
 She was very excited today was show and tell day.
 Everyone was bringing something special to school.
 What was Hello Kitty going to bring?

Hello Kitty looked at the clock. She saw she saw plenty of clocks. And toys. But none of them were important enough for her. And she wanted to keep on looking for just the right thing. But she couldn't. Her alarm clock said eight o'clock. It was time to get ready for school.

Hello Kitty went to the bathroom to wash her face and brush her teeth. She thought about going to school for show and tell. But there was nothing special about a toothbrush. Everybody had one of those.

Hello Kitty looked up and saw a bottle of Mama's favorite perfume on the shelf. Kids in school might like Hello Kitty perfume, but Mama would not like it at all!

Hello Kitty got dressed and went downstairs to help Mama make breakfast. She poured the milk while Mama fried the eggs. I hope my family can help me think of something to bring for show and tell. Kitty thought as they all sat down at the table.

But her sister, Mimi, didn't have any ideas. Mama and Papa didn't have any suggestions, either. "Don't worry, Hello Kitty! Mama and Papa know you'll think of something!"

There was no time to think of anything right now. It was eight thirty. The school bus would be coming any minute.

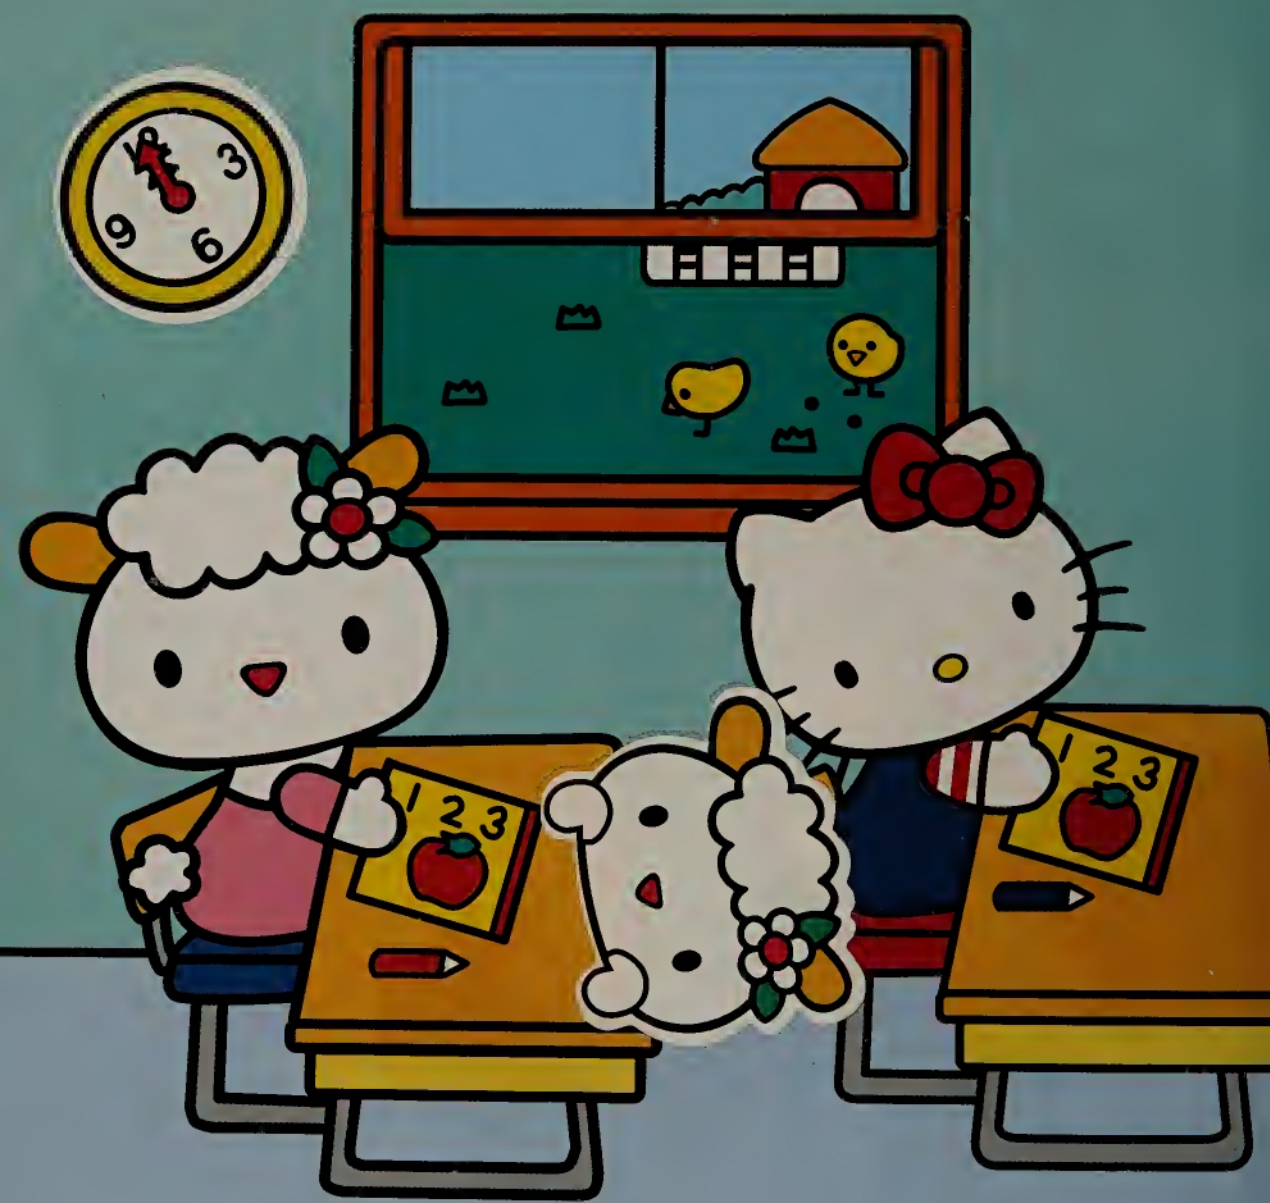

Hello Kitty met her friend Thomas at the bus stop. "Hi, Kitty," Thomas greeted her. He held up a brand new wheelbarrow with a sailboat on the front. "Look what I brought for you and tell me what you brought!"

"It's a surprise!" I told Kitty. Kitty thought I was even better a surprise to me. Kitty thought.

At school, all of the kids were talking about show-and-tell day. But Mr. Bean said, "You will have to wait, class. Show-and-tell time is not until after lunch."

Everyone groaned everyone but Kelly. Kitty. I still have time to think of something to share with the class, she thought happily as she opened her math book.

After math, the class has had an art lesson.
Hello Kitty painted a picture using circles, squares, and triangles.

At free playtime, Hello Kitty and her pal Rory went to the block area. They worked together to build a tower.

Finally, the bell rang for lunch.

Hello Kitty's friends chatted happily through lunch. Hello Kitty didn't say a word. She was too busy thinking of something to share with the class for show-and-tell. Hello Kitty walked over to the cafeteria window.

Beautiful flowers were growing in the garden." A flowerer would be a nice thing to share," Hello Kitty said to herself. Then she noticed a sign on the grass. It said:
DO NOT PICK THE FLOWERS.

After lunch, the children went back to the classroom. It was show-and-tell time. Hello Kitty was very worried. What if Mr. Bear chose her to go first?

Luckily, Mr. Bear chose Thomas to go first. He talked about his new lunchbox.

Next, Fifi showed Kitty the both how to write the letter H. Hello Kitty really liked hearing about her friends' favorite things. She and Telly had a fun day. Suddenly, Hello Kitty got a great idea. She began to write something in her notebook.

When Mr Barry called Little Kitty's name, she stood proudly. She had something special to share with the class, so she happily sang about show-and-tell day at school. She had written all by herself.

Hello Kitty sang out loud and she clear:

"Show-and-tell day is so great.

Mark it on the calendar, it's a special date.

Show-and-tell day is such fun.

We can't wait for another one!"

The class cheered and clapped so. Hello Kitty sang her song again And everyone sang along.

It's show-and-tell day in Hello Kitty's class.

But she can't decide what to bring.

Use the stickers to help Hello Kitty through her day, and find out what she decides to share!
